

Article Overview

You can purchase fiber optic cables directly from manufacturers like Amphenol Custom Cable, OmniCable, and various Thomasnet-listed suppliers.

Direct Manufacturers

Amphenol Custom Cable allows direct sales to end users, offering custom fiber optic assemblies, wiring harnesses, and integrated solutions. Their TL 9000 certified plant in Tampa, Florida, manufactures fiber, copper, RF, and specialty cables, supporting both small and large deployments with rapid lead times and national logistics support (buy.customcable.com) . OmniCable provides a large inventory of fiber optic cables from leading manufacturers such as Corning, Belden, and Superior Essex. They offer custom cable cutting, kitting, and technical support tailored to your needs, making it suitable for both standard and specialized fiber optic applications (omnicable.com) .

Regional and Online Suppliers

Thomasnet lists numerous fiber optic cable manufacturers and suppliers across the USA, including options for custom, plenum, armored, and outdoor cables. Many of these suppliers provide direct sales, prototype to high-volume production, and certifications like CSA, UL, and AS9100D (thomasnet.com) . Manhattan, NYC Suppliers offer fiber optic products including cables, connectors, transceivers, and networking equipment. These suppliers cater to both commercial and residential customers, providing consultation, fast delivery, and technical support for direct purchases (manhattan-nyc.com) .

Tips for Buying Direct

- o Check certifications: Ensure the manufacturer meets industry standards like ISO9001, TL-9000, or Telcordia GR-326 CORE for quality assurance.
- o Custom options: Many manufacturers offer custom lengths, fiber types (single-mode, multimode), and assemblies.
- o Volume flexibility: Some suppliers support low-volume orders, ideal for small businesses or personal projects.
- o Technical support: Look for manufacturers providing installation guidance, testing, and kitting services. By contacting these manufacturers directly, you can access high-quality fiber optic cables without going through distributors, often with options for customization and technical support.
